UNITED BRETHREN CONFERENCE HERE

CENTENNIAL AND SILVER ANNIVERSARY OF CHURCH

Bishop Clippinger Will Preside and Many Preachers and Lay Delegates Will Be Present—United States Senator Simeon D. Fess Will Speak Sunday, September 6—Public Cordially Invited To All Sessions.

The Southeast Ohio annual conference of the United Brethren church will meet in the United Brethren church in this city next week. The session will last five days and will begin September first.

The first conference of the U. B. church was held in Fairfield county June 16, 1825, at the home of George Gaul, therefore, this session will be known in history as the Centennial-Silver anniversary session of the Scioto-Southeast Ohio annual conference, as this will be the 25th anniversary of the Southeast Ohio conference and the Centennial anniversary of the Scioto conference, which is now a part of the Southeast Ohio conference.

Rev. A. B. Clippinger D. D., is the presiding bishop of the conference; Rev. J. H. Harris, superintendent; Rev. E. H. Dailey, recording secretary; Rev. E. E. Harris, statistical secretary; E. S. Neuding, conference treasurer; Rev. S. R. Shaw, treasurer Preachers' Aid fund; P. M. Streich, treasurer Aid Pension fund; Rev. S. F. Daugherty D. D., president Mutual Benefit association.

Altho eight conference sessions had been held in this territory previous to one hundred years ago, the Miami conference at a session held at the home of Abraham Bookwalter in Ross county, June 11, 1824, divided its territory which led to the formation of the Scioto annual conference.

While it is quite certain that the general conference of 1833, held at the Dresbach church appointed agents to secure subscription and capital for the printing of a religious paper and the establishment of a publishing house, the Scioto conference formally appointed John Russell, George Dresbach and Jonathan Dresbach trustees at its session May 21, 1834, and the first number of the "Religious Telescope" appeared December 31, 1834.

The Circleville church was organized in 1839 and the first building was completed prior to July 17, 1841. On August 1, 1845, the trustees of the Circleville church rented the front basement room of their church to the Publishing House trustees for a period of four years and for a consideration of eighty dollars per year. Here the "Religious Telescope" was published until the removal of the printing establishment to Dayton, Ohio, in 1853.

The general conference at Circleville in 1845 voted to establish an educational institution. The Scioto conference in session at the Bethlehem church (abandoned), near Circleville, in Pickaway county, October, 1846, took action to establish a college and Jonathan Dresbach, William Hanby and Lewis Davis were named the first trustees. The action resulted in the founding of Otterbein college in 1847.

There will be morning, afternoon and evening sessions of the conference and about 200 ministers and delegates will be present, besides the visitors.

United States Senator Simeon D. Fess will deliver an address Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock on "Our Relation to Foreign Problems."

The public is invited to attend all the sessions of the conference.

SUNDAY SERVICES

OLD IRONSIDES TO BE SAVED ELKS ORDER ASSUMES TASK

Will Make Contact With Every School In Nation And Stage Patriotic Lessons Interwoven With The Deeds And Adventures of The Famous Ship—Now Tied To Pier In Boston Navy Yard.

President Elliot's famous Five Foot Shelf wouldn't commence to hold all the volumes written around the battles, cruises and escapes of "Old Ironsides," the most famous of all fighting ships in the American navy, yet out of the mass of literature written around this historic treasure there is practically nothing that tells of the U. S. frigate CONSTITUTION as being one of the fastest sailing ships that has ever been designed and built on American shores. Yet it is a fact that "Old Ironsides" was the first Yankee "skimming dish" and that the old frigate in 1809 showed more speed than the Columbia did when she outsailed the Shamrock in the last of her famous cup races.

The modern yatchman, after one look at the Constitution would be very likely to say "the old tub couldn't get out of her own way." In a few words this famous old Yankee warship was what a yachtsman might call the original Yankee "skimming dish." She deepened on her breadth of beam to keep her upright when the wind blew high, just as our typical yachts of twenty-five years ago did. In her famous race with the British squadron off the Jersey beach—a race that took place only a few miles south of the international yacht racing grounds, the wide and shoal model was victorious, just as the Yankee yacht model has always been victorious. This is not to say that a "breadth of beam equal to three times the depth of hold is best known, but that the model of the Constitution was better than that of any warship she ever met.

The bows of the Constitution were made rounding because long twenty-four pounders were to be pointed out of ports on each side of the stem of "bow chasers." The crew needed deck space when handling one of the old-time guns with its side tackles. But if the bows were round the lines were not as hard under water as one might think at first glance. Indeed, the under water body of the old Constitution if it is to be critically examined, will be found astonishingly near to that of some of the swiftest of our tiny racers, wherein the toboggan model always whips that approaching a needle.

And speaking of yachts suggests another very interesting comparison. The waterline of the yacht Columbia (the cup defender) was a little less than four times her beam and so was the Constitution's. The beam of the Columbia was a little more than twice the draft of the hull, properly speaking, that is, excluding the fin keel, and so, too, is that of the Constitution. The greatest breadth of beam in the Constitution was at about one-third of her length forward of her taff rail, and the Columbia's is not far from the same location. Of course this is not to say that the two models are alike; it is to call attention to some remarkable coincidences in their main proportions. Joshua Humphries who designed the Constitution, knew how to determine the main proportions of his ships.

Just how fast the Constitution could sail has been recorded often in her log-books. When the squall struck her in her famous race for the life of the nation, she reached away with a wind that was barely free at eleven knots an hour. By her log during the year, 1809, she showed "a speed of thirteen and one-half knots going free under top gallant sails." Undoubtedly she had more than half a gale to drive her. It is likely, considering that her royals were furlled that the wind varied from thirty to forty miles an hour. She certainly had the wind just as she wanted it, and we may therefore compare her with the Columbia once more.

In the Columbia's last race with the Shamrock the two had all the wind they wanted, they carried all the sail they could stagger under and it took the Columbia one hour and seventeen and a half minutes to run fifteen miles. It was the race of a lifetime. No man need hope ever to see a more magnificent spectacle, but at best the flyer was able to sail at a rate of a little more than twelve knots for short spurts. With a beam and smooth water she could do better—if she had things just to her continued on page five

BIRDSHOT FOR FOUR MEN IN MELON PATCH

Said They Were Hunting for Turtles and Exhibited Seine as Proof.

Caught in a melon patch, where they said they had wandered while hunting for turtles, four Columbus men were subjected to a barrage of birdshot, Thursday night on the farm of Dave Tarbill, northeast part of Fayette county. Those wounded were given treatment, and the four were locked up over night in the Fayette county jail at Washington Court House.

John Luke, aged 30, 453 Mt. Vernon avenue and Henry Lewis, aged 44 573 East Spring street, were kept in a doctor's office for an hour after the encounter, while the tiny shot was being plucked from their skin. Arthur Thomas, aged 42, colored, 222 Cleveland avenue, also was wounded slightly. The fourth member of the quartet was James Mulligan, aged 29, who did not give his Columbus address.

Mr. Tarbill had employed a man to protect his melon patch. At a late hour, Thursday, the guardian saw the four men on the premises. When they did not immediately obey the command to leave he fired at them. In substantiation of their claim that they were hunting turtles, the men exhibited a seine.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

LEADS IN MAKING GOOD AMERICANS

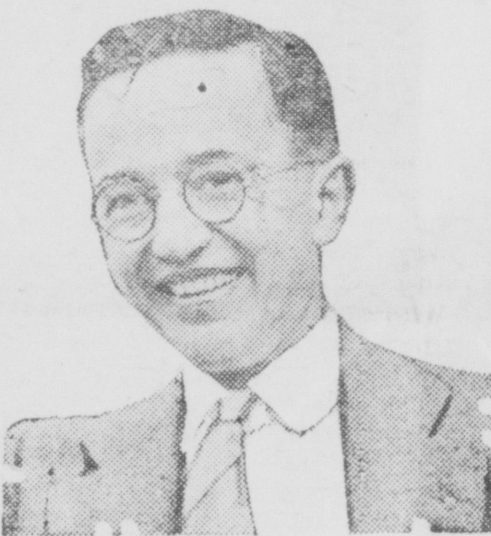

Although Frank Clay Cross, new director of the national Americanism commission of the American Legion, has spent much of his life, as he says, "above the clouds," far up the sides of Colorado mountains just at the timber line, he measures up to a family tradition of grasping the facts of life as they are and fighting to mold them into something better.

It is the pioneer spirit, a spirit that goes out into the wilderness and hews from dense forests homes and cities and states, a spirit that conquers plains and mountains and, the physical side subdued, moves on to wrestle mightily with the finer, the spiritual things.

Frank Cross's family has been a family of fighting pioneers for generations, always on the frontier of civilization. His forebears came to America before the Revolution. His great-grandfather was a pioneer settler in Marion county, Indiana, where national headquarters of the Legion is located. The family trekked across country with the covered wagon. From Indiana they moved into Iowa when that state was opening up. Then to Kansas and to Colorado, while the buffalo were still on the plains and Indian bands roamed the country. "In coming to Indianapolis," he says, "I am the first of the tribe to back track and hit the trail for the East."

He had laid a precedent in some sort for that, when he hit the trail for overseas and the battlefields of France when there was work that needed much to be done over there. Ancestors of his had fought in every one of the nation's wars. His entire family—his father, two brothers and himself—volunteered in '17. A younger brother, Charles, lost his life in France.

Frank Cross put in 13 months in France. He was on detached service with the British north of Calais, looking after American troops who came across the channel from England. Then he was sent down to Tours with the French, where he handled all shipments out of that city. He was discharged in Wyoming in July, 1919.

He became assistant chemist with an oil company for about a year. In the interval he married Miss Helen M. Fry, a former schoolmate at the University of Denver. She was of a family of teachers and Cross' thoughts turned to that profession. He went in for more schooling—economics, sociology and political science—and then became superintendent of a consolidated school. In 1923 he became head of the department of economics at the Colorado School of Mines.

He also became a lecturer at the Denver "opportunity school." That was a turning point for him, the thing which led directly to his appointment as director of the Americanism commission. He gave lectures of advice, inspiration, information. He touched on anything which would be generally helpful to the foreign-born seeking to become American citizens and to play their part as such. He had two thoughts in mind. One was to give all the information necessary to pass the naturalization examination. The other was to give them an understanding and appreciation of America, of what the country stands for, of its history, its institutions, its customs, its ideals, its aspirations—and to inspire them to live good American citizens. "Just better citizenship" is the way he sums it up.

Helping to make out the questions for teacher examinations in the Colorado schools, the new director found out that many of the teachers, especially in outlying districts, knew "less than a kid ought to know" about the fundamentals of Americanism. So he organized an Americanism section in the State Education association. He also formed the Allied Council for Americanism Committees, embracing the various patriotic societies of the state.

Meantime John C. Vivian, commander of the Colorado department of the Legion, had seen his work and invited him to become chairman of the state Americanism committee. From this position he was advanced by the national executive committee to the directorship of the National Americanism commission, where he goes on pioneering (as his fathers had done for years before him), not with dreamy velivities but with a practicality that goes to the heart of the problem, for a better America.

Secretary Work Says Whole Nation Will Profit Through Giving Aid To Domestic Sugar Beet Growers

(c) U & U

Dr. Hubert Work, Secretary of the Interior, whose picture is inset above in a photograph of beet loading from a field that was desert a few years ago, has made vigorous pleas recently for the thousands of Americans who raise sugar beets on the reclaimed lands of the west. Below Dr. Work's picture is part of a prize herd of Colorado sheep, fed from beet tops and pulp.

The sugar beet has become recognized as the prime rotation crop of the reclamation area, but present prices are said to make the farmer barely break even, and the farmers' associations claim that had President Coolidge decided to lower the sugar tariff the whole industry would have been wiped out in a year.

Secretary Work said in a recent interview at Cheyenne, Wyoming: "I find that the entire reclamation area has been stimulated and helped by President Coolidge's decision to retain the sugar tariff.

"The growing of sugar beets is one of the most natural and nationally profitable uses to which our reclaimed land can be put. Thousands of American citizens have invested years of careful work and all the money they have in developing small beet sugar farms. To them the President's action means that they can continue without going bankrupt or living like peons on a Cuban plantation. To the country at large the decision means preservation and increase of a domestic supply of a vitally basic commodity. With the tariff lowered we would soon have no domestic sugar crops and then closely organized interests, operating outside the jurisdiction of our anti-trust laws, could charge us what they pleased for sugar."

THE "WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN" SAYS:

Meeting reporters of the various news organizations is one of the daily tasks of the President of the United States. The upper photo shows President Coolidge meeting newspaper reporters on the lawn at the summer "White House" at Swampscott, Mass. In the center of the group and facing the President is Dale Van Every, United Press Correspondent at Swampscott. Inset is President Coolidge walking with W. J. Losh, manager of the Washington United Press Bureau.

When the "White House Spokesman" speaks the whole world listens.

The President of the United States is perhaps the foremost news producer. What the government is going to do to aid farmers, to collect foreign debts, to reduce taxes—all is news not only along the highways of this nation but also along the byways of every civilized country.

So it is that bona fide correspondents of American and foreign press associations and newspapers eagerly gather at the press conferences of the President. They are held twice each week whether he is in Washington or, as now, at the summer White House in Swampscott, Mass.

The greatest care is taken to protect the President against erroneous quotation and misinterpretation because his utterances "for guidance" carry tremendous import.

Pat McKenna, for years the doorkeeper at the White House Executive offices passes on each correspondent who seeks to attend the conferences. Secret service men flank the President during the meetings.

Nothing he says can be quoted directly unless he specifically authorizes it. The correspondents submit their questions in writing. In advance of the conference, the President reads them, ignores those he doesn't wish to consider and answers those he selects for discussion.

Thus the President, through the press, speaks to the people and the people, through representative correspondents, question the President that they may learn the government viewpoint on pending issues.

The accompanying pictures reveal United Press correspondents obtaining news from the chief executive. Read their dispatches appearing in this newspaper and keep informed on what the "White House Spokesman" says.

"There's a bit of a hole in the fence," was the calm reply.

Box Coat of Velvet and Skirt of White Flannel

This outfit, consisting of a box coat of velvet and a straight skirt of white flannel, makes a charming combination of color and fabric for autumn sports wear.

Matter of "Making Over"

Simple for Dressmaker

Never has the problem of "making over" been so simple as during the present season. The dresses are so short, so narrow, and practically sleeveless, that they require little material, time or labor for their fashioning. Sometimes an entire dress can be constructed from a plaited skirt, supplemented with a small amount of other material, usually of a contrasting color, for trimming.

One plaited white flannel skirt was carefully pressed, after the hem had been ripped out and the belt removed, turned the "wrong" way of the goods, and with the addition of collar, cuffs and a wide band around the bottom, all of green flannel, the home dressmaker produced in a very short time, a smart sports frock. A similar skirt was the genesis of a white flannel dress having collar, cuffs and godets of scarlet flannel. A heavy green crepe silk skirt was made into a dress which had neck and sleeve trimming, and an applied band, just above the knee, of tan silk. These dresses were all cut in one piece with kimono sleeves.

With care a separate waist and skirt pattern can be used in cutting over a skirt. A quaint little bodice frock with a gathered skirt was evolved from the skirt of a lavender beach cloth middy suit. This dress was trimmed with a soft white flannel collar and ruffled cuffs.

The full skirt of a dress three or four years old often can be used for the main portion of a new garment by turning the material the wrong way and "piecing out" the length with scraps from the waist, sleeves, girdle or sash.

By studying fashion cuts the resourceful woman can find new ideas whereby she can utilize the old dresses which are too out of date to wear with ease of mind, but are "too good" to discard because of the excellent quality of the material in them.

An Array of Colors for Milady's New Fall Coat

Color will be predominant in coats for fall. Brown and blue effects are in the lead. Among the blues favored are french blue, rouen blue, periwinkle blue, old blue flax blue, bleu de roi.

Other prominent colors are bracken, cocoa, chocolate, chinese red and yellow, onion brown, almond and caster, beige, smoke gray, eucalyptus and emerald green, combinations of twine and beige, biscuit and beige; bud and blossom shades are good, while the pastel shades will still be much in evidence. Combinations of black and white, sometimes called "day-and-night" effects, are also looked upon with favor.

Among the leading furs used are nutria, roccoon, chinchilline, wolf in apricot, blue, havana brown, eclipse, natural and black. Lynx cat is popular, while skunk is employed in a black-and-white combination, which is effective on a black coat giving a so-called "day-and-night" effect.

Japanese fox, ringtail cat in natural and cocoa, and squirrel in the new shades of rose martin and blue fox, as well as natural, are other furs which are well liked. Kit fox is being used especially in eclipse and light blue and also in the natural.

Rage for Plaiting Now Reaches to Glove Cuffs

Obviously, plaiting has come to stay, perhaps for several seasons. There is, at the moment, a perfect craze for it and its dainty, decorative quality is found to add charm to many things other than an evening gown in the fashionable wardrobe. Some of the new transparent coats which have achieved a sudden popularity are made of chiffon, marquisette, georgette or lace plaited very fine. Among the newest things in scarfs are some of plaited material, or of plain goods finished with a plaited ruffle at each end. Neck ruffs, hat trimmings, even glove-cuffs are seen in plaiting, and some of the luxuries in negligees and lingerie are of plaited chiffon mouseline or crepe de chine.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting, and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

COLOSSAL GUILLIBILITY OF
CUSTOMERS OF BOOTLEGERS

Treasury Bulletins May Be Issued Showing How Much of The Stuff Is Poison And How Little Is Genuine—Venders Are Growing Rich At The Expense of Wealth And Health of Patrons.

General Lincoln C. Andrews says the most surprising thing to him about men who patronize a bootlegger is their colossal guillibility.

The new assistant secretary of the treasury was continuing an exclusive, unauthorized interview granted the United Press when he made the remark. Disliking exaggeration, he passed over the phrase.

"Yes," he decided, "that's it. Their colossal guillibility."

Andrews, who was explaining for the first time his plans for enforcing prohibition, said he had in mind the idea of educating consumers of "genuine Scotch whisky" and other allegedly imported liquor.

"We might let them know what they are drinking," he proposed.

Treasury bulletins, showing how much of the bootlegger sells is more or less poison and how little of it is genuine, may be prepared and issued periodically.

"I don't know at the present time how much of the stuff sold as genuine is spurious," the general admitted. "But I believe it might be a good idea to have an analysis made and reports issued."

"From what some of the government chemists tell me, patrons of the bootleggers might have their eyes opened."

"It is amusing to me," he continued, "how men who have common sense in other matters and would demand proof of other claims when their health as well as their wealth is concerned, seem to accept without question the statements of men they know to be criminals, violators of their country's laws."

Andrews hopes to work thru the churches, the Y. M. C. A. and such organizations as the Rotary clubs in educating those who constitute the "market" for bootleg liquor, as well as in gathering reports on the progress of prohibition.

Suppression of the liquor traffic is to be the main objective of his federal forces; beyond this, the people must help.

The general came to a discussion of the point where a community is cut off from outside supplies of liquor.

"There may be an undesirable element in that community which will attempt to continue to manufacture liquor and dispense it," he suggested. "In that case, it will, in a measure, be up to the respectable members of the community to decide whether they want such men in their midst. They will know who is making the liquor and what to do about it.

"Public sentiment probably will rid such a community of its bootleggers."

Desiring to put prohibition enforcement upon a dignified business footing, General Andrews sees two phases to violation with which he will attempt to deal, the "supply" and the "market."

In another portion of the interview he explained that the government will seek to curb the supply of liquor at its source, will strike hard at the bootlegger who is gathering and distributing illegal supplies and will tighten control of liquor traffic all along the line.

When it comes to the question of the bootleg "market," Andrews looks for cooperation. He hopes to win this thru the kind of men he has appointed as regional directors and their subordinates.

"I wanted $60,000 a year men who would make a sacrifice and take appointments in the prohibition unit and help put it over," he explained.

"As far as possible, I want my administrators to be in charge of their home districts. I don't want people of a certain state, for example, to feel that I think it necessary to get a man from outside to tell them how to manage their affairs. In every instance where such a course has been practicable, a local man has been chosen."

General Andrews believes the confidence of the people is to be won thru dignified enforcement which will not quibble over petty infringements to the extent of losing sight of big offenders. And he believes that with restoration of respect for law enforcement will come a sentiment in favor of prohibition that will make the entire country dry.

"What have you to say to the man who doesn't believe in prohibition and continues to drink?" the general was asked.

"For God's sake, don't patronize the bootlegger," he replied emphatically. They are enriching themselves at your expense, possibly at the expense of your health.

"They are violating the law, frequently by means of corruption and you are helping them to profit by it."

"They are buying apartment houses and laying up wealth that may make their children the aristocracy of the next generation, while yours will have to work."

"If you are going to drink—well don't patronize the bootleggers."

Famous English Park

Hyde park is a famous pleasure ground in London, a mile and a half long and three-fourths of a mile wide, extending westward from Piccadilly to Kensington gardens and covering an area of 390 acres. It was formerly the ancient manor of Hyde, belonging to the abbey of Westminster, and was laid out as a park and enclosed in 1535, in the reign of Henry VIII. In Elizabeth's time, stags were still hunted there, and under Charles II it was used for horse racing. The "Serpentine," an artificial sheet of water, was introduced by Queen Caroline, wife of George II.—Kansas City Star.

AMUSEMENTS

A trio of the most popular players on the screen, as well as a host of favorites in minor roles, make up the cast of "The Sporting Venus" Marshall Neilan's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production coming to the Met theater Monday.

Blanche Sweet, who has risen to greater heights than ever before since her return to the screen two years ago plays the titular character of the "Sporting Venus." It is a role which she plays with such dash and finish that it seems impossible that she is the same person who created the screen role of "Anna Christie."

Opposite Miss Sweet in the leading male part is Ronald Colman, who rose to international popularity in "The White Sister," "Tarnish," "Romola" and "Her Night of Romance."

Lew Cody, one of the most villainous villains of the screen, combines his usual "cinema" rascalities with some delightful comedy as an impoverished European prince.

The supporting cast include Edward Martindel, Kate Price, Arthur Hoyt, Hank Mann, Josephine Crowell, George Fawcett and others.

"DOG ROBBER"

Tells How and Why Army Officers Make Soldiers Servants.

Do you know what a "dog robber" is? He is an enlisted man in the United States army who acts as a sort of a body servant for a commissioned officer. In an effort to determine the attitude of the private soldier toward becoming what is substantially a valet, Liberty has consulted several men who have been "dog robbers," or "strikers." One private tells the why and wherefore of the system in this week's Liberty. Says he:

"Maybe you wonder what the word 'dog robber' means? The best explanation I can give for it is the old army story that a striker got the name because he is supposed to have matched his skipper's dog for the dog's food and bed, and the dog lost."

"The 'dog robber' makes his skipper's bed. He polishes his skipper's boots. He is a footman, a butler, a valet, and bottle washer. He's housekeeper, errand boy and clothes presser for his officer, if his officer isn't married, and if he's a real good 'dog robber' he can even cook and mix drinks."

"The World War changed many things in our army, among which is the attitude of the officer toward the soldier and toward his striker. In the old days the officer who rose from the ranks was the toughest egg in the basket."

"There's a lot of swank in the army now that was never there before the war, and that's why it is harder to get strikers. A limey of the enlisted man class is a natural born servant, but you can't find that class in America."

With the Flag Above and Glory Beckoning

We printed the other day some remarks on the last journey of the battleship Oregon to a quiet harbor in which the ship will be kept on exhibition, in comparison with the historic journey which it made around the Horn to join Sampson's fleet as war with Spain loomed on the horizon. The latter journey attracted no notice. The whole nation, hearts aflutter, stood by as the earlier one progressed.

A contributor to the New York Sun, one who was evidently one of the crew in the Oregon's historic race, tells of an incident which ought to be preserved.

When a warship goes into action, as it was feared the Oregon would be compelled to do with the Cervera squadron lying in wait, it is customary to clear the vessel of lifeboats and rafts, as splinters from them are as dangerous as shot and shell of the enemy. If the Spaniards had appeared the Oregon would have had thus to strip itself and a shot below the waterline would then have sent the entire personnel of the ship to Davy Jones' locker. The contingency caused considerable discussion on the ship. Finally one of the officers put the matter up to Captain Clark. He said:

"Captain, if we get into a fight with the Spanish fleet after casting all our boats and rafts adrift, and we get one good shot below the waterline, what is going to become of us?"

"Well," said Captain Clark, "a $5,000,000 coffin will be good enough for me."

That ended all discussion along that line. Every man felt that if the Oregon was a good enough coffin for Captain Clark it was good enough for him—if so it must be they would fight to the limit and go down with the colors flying to a glorious death for their country.—New Orleans States.

Trouble for Norfolk Duke

These are hard times, even for the duke of Norfolk, who is one of the wealthiest noblemen in the world today. As the present duke is only sixteen years of age, his mother manages family affairs. She decided to close Arundel castle until her son was of age, leaving only caretakers at the ducal seat. In the meantime the duchess and young duke will live in Italy, where the rate of exchange will permit the family coffers to be replenished by the time the duke reaches his majority. However, as he owns most of London between the Strand and the Thames river Norfolk will be able to struggle along in spite of taxes.—Le Figaro.

Has Sun a Companion?

What may be a genuine companion to the sun has been discovered in the constellation of Taurus, the Bull, according to a study by Dr. W. J. Layton, of the Harvard College observatory. The star, which is known as 46 Tauri, and just barely visible to the unaided eye, has been observed at the Lick observatory in California, and the Dominion Astrophysical observatory at Victoria, B. C. It is approaching the sun at a speed of about half a kilometer per second, which is a very slow velocity, astronomically speaking. As its motion across the sky is also relatively slight, it is believed to be moving through space with the sun.

Advocates Mutual Creed

A mutual creed for all denominations was advocated at Cardiff, Wales, by one of the leading speakers at the twelfth quadrennial council of Reformed churches. He urged the council to recommend adoption of "a common statement of faith for the Reformed churches, more distinct than the Reformed creeds, but one which would absorb the best of the Westminster confession and other similar creeds." He welcomed the efforts under way to unite all the Christian religions and urged that his hearers should lend all possible aid to this object without sacrificing their church.—Family Herald.

May Revive Old Court

An Oxford (England) undergraduate is to be tried in the ordinary courts of assize on a charge of manslaughter arising out of a motor accident. The frequency of motor smashes in which undergraduates are concerned and the gravity of their attendant consequences has led a famous law don to suggest that the court of the lord high steward should try and punish the offenders.

This university court has been in existence since 1404, although it has not tried a case since a century before the days of Blackstone.

Practicing Law at 92

Northern Ireland has still in active practice a lawyer who has reached the age of ninety-two. He is George Hill Smith, who was born in 1833 but did not go to the bar till at the age of forty-four. He practiced in Dublin and on the northeast circuit and on the setting up of a separate Ulster judiciary confined himself to Belfast where he acts as one of the crown counsel.

Ornate Telegraph Pole

Because the old telegraph pole in front of the city hall at Aberdeen, Wash., was ugly and not in keeping with the city hall architecture, Councilman James Empey succeeded in getting the railway and light company of his town to remove it and replace it with a new one of becoming design, brightly painted. The pole will carry a brass plate giving the distinction of its choice to the councilman.

OLD IRONSIDES TO BE SAVED

liking, she might equal the record speed of the old Constitution!

This comparison of the speed of the cup defender of twenty-five years ago and the old frigate that was built in 1797 will undoubtedly shock the modern yachtsman, but they are based on historic facts and cannot be denied. The old frigate was built to run or fight and she proved her class in both.

The Constitution successfully out-sailed every fleet and every ship that encountered her. In forty battles she never tasted defeat. Today she is tied to a pier in the Boston navy yard with bulging hull and rotting timbers, and unless the children of the nation subscribe the $500,000 necessary for her restoration the famous old historic ship will suffer her first defeat.

The Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks with 1400 lodges and 900,000 members have assumed the job of saving "Old Ironsides." During October 19th-24th, which has been designated as "Old Ironsides Week" the Elks will make contact with every school in the nation, stage patriotic lessons interwoven with the deeds and adventures of "Old Ironsides," present each school with a four colored reproduction of the old ship, painted by Charles R. Patterson, the noted marine artist, and then take up the collection of the kiddies to restore the old ship. James R. Nicholson, past grand exalted ruler of the Elks is directing the drive for the Elks with headquarters at the Boston navy yard. Rear Admiral L. R. de Steiguer, commandant of the first naval district, is chairman of the national committee which has the job of raising the funds to restore the frigate.

"Every American who has sailed a ship should have an interest in 'Old Ironsides,'" says Rear Admiral de Steiguer. "She is the last survivor of those romantic days and the yachtsmen of today should do their part in helping the restoration by sending their mite to the nearest lodge of Elks. The children are to be given the first opportunity, but if we wish to get all the money necessary we have to appeal to the adults of the nation."

SQUIRREL LAW

Warning that drastic action will be instituted against all persons found violating the Ohio law governing squirrel hunting has been announced by D. O. Thompson, chief of the state division of fish and game.

Attention was directed by Thompson to the statutory provision authorizing the levying of fines up to $200 by local courts against persons convicted of hunting out of season.

Indorsement was given by Thompson to the proposal that the game laws be amended so as to not only provide for forfeiture of license by violators of game laws, but also to decree that offenders under sufficient provocation, be not permitted to obtain a license again.

The squirrel hunting season opens September 15 and ends on October 20. The law prohibits the squirrel hunter from bagging more than five squirrels a day, and prohibits their sale.

Odd Welsh Architecture

The old High street of Conway in North Wales is characteristic of Great Britain in nothing more than in its mixture of architectural styles and chance effects, says the Christian Science Monitor. Saxon, Norman, Flemish, Tudor, early Victorian and a touch of Gothic are all shown in the few buildings here represented. Could we see more of this typically British High street, doubtless we should find "Queen Anne" in evidence somewhere; also late Victorian and Neo-Georgian are well represented.

Town planning, as one so often sees it in other countries, was never quite the custom in Great Britain. A street in one of her towns represents very much more than a mere pipe in her history.

How Bryan Kept Cool

William Jennings Bryan once told how he kept cool when making a speech.

"Do you know," he observed, "that when I am addressing an audience in a particularly warm hall, I take a small piece of ice about the size of a pullet's egg. I put it in the palm of my right hand and hold it tightly. Then I shift it to my left hand, holding it in either hand for about five minutes.

"Then I pass my cold hands over my forehead. I have always found this very effective."

That was the first great step towards the giving of free hand opportunity to capable individual producers. "The Miracle Man" returned a tremendous profit. The financial backers had originally committed themselves to provide one hundred thousand dollars to be expended at the sole discretion of Mr. Tucker. When sixty thousand only had been expended, I made the deal with Zukor which guaranteed a tremendous profit whether the picture be good, bad or indifferent. Of course it was good and made plenty.

Now I come to the important point in my story. Just as a lot of mad prospectors in a gold field rush blindly hither and yon following the latest rumored "strike," so did the movie crowd frantically try to gain success by the "individual unit" idea of production. In making Tucker's contract I had carefully arranged that we would assume all responsibility and would be free from all interference. Following the success of "The Miracle Man," the producers began the "gold field rush" and blindly gave out contracts right and left to individuals who were not capable of assuming the responsibility. You see they thought, foolishly enough, that it was the "utter freedom of action" which had brought success, instead of knowing that giving responsibility is a great way to get results, only if you are careful as to what individuals are given the responsibility.

Anyway, the firm which financed us for "The Miracle Man" refused to listen to the pleadings of Mr. Tucker and myself regarding what individuals might be given responsibility and so within a year the company had sunk a million in addition to the fortune "The Miracle Man" had made for them. The banker, who had refused to listen, found his bank closed and the "general manager," a former clothing-store manager, who had handed out "carte blanche" contracts with kinglike waves of the arm, passed down and out and later committed suicide.

That was a serious blow to "individual" production. The following year there were more cases where the wrong individuals abused the confidence granted them by financial backers. There, within a period of three years, a dozen individuals did very serious harm to the idea of "individual units" of production. The big companies began a complicated system of "supervising" and "committee producing."

Ingenious Machines

At a recent German motor show there was exhibited a tank-plow. A caterpillar tractor working like an army tank drew a plow.

An automatic potato digger has been designed that the inventor says will prove a wonderful labor-saving machine on the farm. It not only digs up the potatoes, but discharges them in windrows for pickers.

Looking like a huge mosquito, a new machine is said to be able to bore a hole three feet deep and nine inches in diameter in half a minute. The machine looks like a small engine on four wheels, and carries a huge corkscrew-like drill in front of it at the end of two braces. A pull on a lever is sufficient to start the drill downward. Another pull stops it at the desired depth and brings it back to the starting point. The inventor built his original model from 23 pieces of farm machinery.

An Indianapolis man was visiting in the country near where some small boys had an excellent swimming place. The lads, in friendly fashion, invited him in one afternoon.

One lad looked at him with a puzzled expression, then asked:

"Haven't you washed off since then?"—Exchange.

LAND SHARKS ARRESTED BY GOVERNMENT

Big Swindle Uncovered—Lots Under Water Sold at $100 Each.

Federal warrants charging use of the mails with intent to defraud were issued Thursday night for Jacob Factor, president of the Florida Land Co., and several associates, after a two months' investigation by postal inspectors.

The company is alleged to have done a business of between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000 in Florida real estate since its incorporation in Springfield last March. Besides Factor, the others named in the warrants are Maurice E. Drucker, H. Heinsius, H. J. Himmelstein and Newton Feldman, all officials of the concern.

Factor, according to reports of postal inspectors, before becoming connected with the Florida Land Co., put over a $500,000 fraudulent oil deal in England and is wanted there.

The scheme included the buying of large tracts of land in Orange county, Florida, which was later sold in Chicago and other midwestern cities at an average price of about $100 a lot. The land was represented, it is charged, with being a suburb of Orlando, Florida, termed the second largest city in the state.

Besides an extensive advertising campaign in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Wisconsin, the company also sent out a boosters' committee, which included a Chicago alderman and police captain and which brought back glowing accounts of the land.

The lots, it is alleged, were represented as being improved property, with water, gas and electricity installed, with part of it on the Dixie Highway. Investigators said some of the land is inundated part of the time and none of it is improved.

Many of the investors here are of Polish descent. They also were attracted by stories of a mythical hotel costing $1,000,000 and more than 2000 lots have been sold, investigators said.

While in England several months ago, investigators said, Factor and Drucker organized the British Allied Estates, Ltd., and the Cambrian Trust Ltd, and sold Arkansas oil lands for upwards of $500,000, as a result of which they were sought in England.

Some of the cities circularized by the Florida Land Co., in its "garden-spot-of-the-world" campaign included Chicago, Fort Wayne, Gary and Valparaiso, Indiana.

No Repetitions for Hubby

A few months ago an English illustrated paper published a joke which struck me as having merit. When I repeated it in company of a gentleman who is supposed to know nearly all the jokes in the world he told me that in slightly different guise the same wheeze was current on the Pacific coast twenty years ago. He may or may not have been wrong. In any event, I like the British version.

A couple from the country have come up to London for a week's visit. They have seats in the first gallery for a performance of a society drama. To them the play proves exceedingly tiresome. In one of the intervals the husband, stifling a yawn, turns to his deeply bored wife:

"What comes next?" he asks.

She consults the program.

"It says 'ere, 'Act four, sime as Act one.'"

"Ow!" he exclaims, "let's 'op it. I couldn't sit through all the hawful mess, again."

Roses in Southwest

Most curious are the wild roses of the dry Southwest. They are low-stunted bushes of brown branches and many straight brown or white prickles, more like a gooseberry bush. The fruit is all prickles like the prickly gooseberry of our swamps, says Nature Magazine. The flowers are purple, rose or white, solitary, more like a strawberry bloom than of a rose. As the bushes are built for heat rather than for frost, they are not easy to grow in northern gardens, though they will live and bloom.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

Better Late Than Never

By JUSTIN WENTWOOD
(© by Western Newspaper Union.)

RUMOR was busy in the Towne office in those days. The Towne company was not doing well; it had fallen behind the times. Most of its employees had been with it for years. "I guess we'll all be looking for jobs at the end of the month," said little Miss Chitterling, a spinster of fifty.

"You should worry," answered the bookkeeper. "I guess you've got a wad stowed away."

"Oh, I'm not worrying," answered Miss Chitterling, who had saved just enough to keep herself in existence with great economy.

"She'll miss old Potter to quarrel with," mused the bookkeeper.

Old Potter was fifty-seven, and head of the clerical department. He, too, had saved the barest competence. Rumor said that in the prehistoric days Old Potter and Miss Chitterling had been engaged to be married. Something had come between them, and their quarrels constantly enlivened the office.

"I hear we're all going to be discharged," remarked Miss Chitterling acidly to Potter, as she passed him.

"I guess you'll have to get out and scramble for another job," sneered Potter.

"Maybe," answered Miss Chitterling. "But I tell you one thing—I don't look for a job where you do. I've had enough of you."

"Women in business offices are like a dirty floor," commented Potter. "Matter in the wrong place."

Miss Chitterling thrust her head into the air and passed him contemptuously. Old Potter's smiles were not elegant, to say the least. Old Potter grinned and went back to his work.

The days that followed were fraught with intense anxiety for all of the employees. Soon it was definitely known that the Towne company was being thrust against the wall. It could no longer compete in the market. Reorganization was talked of, but then it was learned that an offer had been made to purchase it, lock, stock and barrel—but not the employees.

No, no sane firm could be expected to take over that ancient lot, as Mr. Potter remarked in the hearing of Miss Chitterling.

During the next week Mr. Potter and Miss Chitterling engaged daily in the worst scraps in their career, so that it was a joy and a pleasure to bring them within sight of each other. The sight of each seemed to set the other's teeth on edge. But finally, when the blow fell, and notice was given to all the employees in a body, a sort of stunned peace descended.

On the last morning Mr. Potter gathered up his few possessions, his office coat and ruler, preparatory to leaving Towne's forever. Well, he was fixed for life in a very humble way. He could face the future with equanimity. But if only he had a friend to go shares, a friend with a little income of his own—how nicely they could manage!

Passing Miss Chitterling's desk, he saw that lady furtively dabbing at her eyes and putting powder on her nose. Miss Chitterling was thinking much the same thing. And Miss Chitterling was thinking of the many years she had spent in the Towne office.

Mr. Potter essayed a sympathetic glance, but it looked to Miss Chitterling like a horrible grin.

"Oh, get out of here!" she cried. "Haven't you any decency at all, to keep up your nagging and grinning at such a time like this?"

"I wasn't grinning, you miserable old cat," snorted Mr. Potter. "I was smiling good-by."

"You were g-grinning like a Cheshire cat, you horrid old man!" answered Miss Chitterling indignantly. "I do believe I hate you more than I could imagine hating Satan himself."

"You used to like me," commented Mr. Potter.

"Those days are past, thank goodness."

"I was only remembering them," said Mr. Potter. "You can't stop me doing that, can you?" he continued.

"Say, remember that little oyster supper we had down at the beach?"

"Yes, and you swore to love me forever, and next day you accused me of making eyes at a s-s-stranger."

"That was because I loved you so much," said Mr. Potter.

"Well, you never loved me since."

"Listen, Elmira," said Mr. Potter. "Ever think how all this scrapping of ours is just the same old love in another form? What are we going to do without each other?"

"I d-d-d-don't kn-know," sobbed Miss Chitterling.

"Say, I was thinking of finding out if they make the same kind of stews down at the beaches now, Elmira. What do you say?"

And as Elmira said nothing Mr. Potter, after a quick glance which showed him that the office was empty, took Miss Chitterling in his arms and kissed her.

Bessie's Ambition.
Bessie, aged six, and sister, aged fourteen, were walking in Garfield park, toward the car line. As they passed a very inviting spot sister said, "Bessie, this is the place where my Girl Scout troop once took a hike. When you grow up, will you be a Scout?"

"Oh, no," replied Bessie gravely. "When I grow up I will be a lady."—Indianapolis News.

IGNITION TIMING
VERY IMPORTANT

Gas Must Be Fully Ignited
at Instant Crank Pin Passes Center.

Correct ignition timing is very important, says William H. Stewart, Jr., president of the Stewart Automobile school. The charge of gas must be fully ignited at the instant the crank pin passes dead center. When this is done the full expansive force of the explosion is exerted on the piston and the best results are obtained. When the motor is turning over at the rate of 1,000 revolutions a minute the crank pin passes through top center much faster than when the motor is turning over at the rate of 500 revolutions per minute. Since it takes a certain amount of time for the charge of gas to become fully ignited it is necessary to introduce the spark into the cylinder a little in advance in order to fully ignite the charge by the time the crank pin passes dead center.

Volume of Spark.

The faster the motor turns over the more advanced must be the spark. The volume of the spark is not changed by advancing or retarding, but simply the time of the spark in relation to position of the crank pin. When a motor is turning over very fast the spark may be advanced as much as 40 degrees; that is to say, the charge will begin to ignite 40 degrees before the crank pin reaches top center. As the speed of the motor is reduced the advance must be reduced, otherwise the force of the explosion will be exerted on the piston too soon and the tendency will be to reverse the direction of the crank shaft. When the spark is too far advanced a knock is noticeable. This is caused by the piston acting against the explosive force. The momentum of the flywheel carries the piston through the cycle; otherwise it would reverse.

Four Segments.

The ignition distributor has four segments, one for each cylinder. The secondary finger "rotating clockwise" touches the segments in the order of 1, 2, 4, 3, which may be the firing order. Pistons No. 1 and No. 4 will be at top center and pistons No. 2 and
No. 3 at bottom center. If piston No.
1 is up on compression and ready for ignition then piston No. 4 has just completed the exhaust and ready for the intake. Likewise piston No. 3 has just completed firing and piston No. 2 the intake.

Knowledge of First Aid
by Autoists Is Needed

That every man or woman who drives an auto should understand simple first aid methods, is the firm conviction of Dr. Herman Bundesen, Chicago health commissioner.
"Every year throughout the country thousands of people unnecessarily lose their lives through automobile accidents, because those who could be of aid at the time of accident, become panicky and lose their heads when there is a cut artery," says Doctor Bundesen. "If they understood the simplest rudiments of first aid, a handkerchief and a pencil or ordinary stick of wood could be used as a tourniquet thus stopping hemorrhage until medical help arrived.
"The autoist, especially, is in need of first aid knowledge. Whether it be the city or en route, he should be provided with a compact first aid kit.
"The common injuries which occur through automobile accidents are cutaneous, fractures or broken bones cuts and bruises. Many minor injuries which through neglect, prove fatal, occur in taking off spare tires. Every wound, no matter how slight, should immediately be swabbed with iodine Splints, used in case of fracture, will keep the limb at rest and relieve the patient of much pain until placed in the hands of the physician."

SIX TRUCKS COVER PICKAWAY COUNTY

Delivering Bread, Etc., of the Wallace Bakery.

Circleville has an industry in the Wallace Bakery that keeps six trucks, four Fords and two Dodge machines busy daily delivering fresh bread, cakes and pies to the people of Pickaway County.

Yesterday The Noecker Motor Co. delivered two large Dodge machines to the Wallace Bakery that were driven through from the Dodge Bros. Manufactory, Detroit, Mich., by Ralph Wallace and Carl Moats; they were accompanied to the manufactory by James Stout who drove a Dodge coupe here for Harry W. Heffner.

Mr. Wallace's reputation as a baker of first-class products will soon be heralded throughout this section of Ohio.

Honolulu

Honolulu this time was a revelation. A magic wand had touched the place and transformed it, even as Miami and Los Angeles have been transformed. It is now a flourishing city in a setting of surpassing loveliness. There is life and progress and enterprise on all sides. The downtown district has become metropolitan and up-to-date. The mountain sides are terraced with beautiful houses to which perfect roads, flower-lined, wind upward under canopies of great spreading trees.

One cannot be long in Honolulu without observing the racial problems which confront its administrators. Over 42 per cent of the population is Japanese, while only 8 per cent is American, British and German. The remainder is divided between Filipinos, Chinese, Hawaiian, semi-Hawaiian and Portuguese. I have seen a photograph of 32 school girls, each of a different race or racial combination.—John T. McCutcheon, in Hearst's International-Cosmopolitan.

UNITED BRETHREN CONFERENCE HERE

CENTENNIAL AND SILVER ANNIVERSARY OF CHURCH

Bishop Clippinger Will Preside and Many Preachers and Lay Delegates Will Be Present—United States Senator Simeon D. Fess Will Speak Sunday, September 6—Public Cordially Invited To All Sessions.

The Southeast Ohio annual conference of the United Brethren church will meet in this city next week. The session will last five days and will begin September first.

The first conference of the U. B. church was held in Fairfield county June 16, 1825, at the home of George Graul, therefore, this session will be known in history as the Centennial-Silver anniversary session of the Scioto-Southeast Ohio annual conference, as this will be the 25th anniversary of the Southeast Ohio conference and the Centennial anniversary of the Scioto conference, which is now a part of the Southeast Ohio conference.

Rev. A. B. Clippinger D. D., is the presiding bishop of the conference; Rev. J. H. Harris, superintendent; Rev. E. H. Dailey, recording secretary; Rev. E. E. Harris, statistical secretary; E. S. Neuding, conference treasurer; Rev. S. R. Shaw, treasurer Preachers' Aid fund; P. M. Streich, treasurer Aid Pension fund; Rev. S. F. Daugherty D. D., president Mutual Benefit association.

Altho eight conference sessions had been held in this territory previous to one hundred years ago, the Miami conference at a session held at the home of Abraham Bookwalter in Ross county, June 11, 1824, divided its territory which led to the formation of the Scioto annual conference.

While it is quite certain that the general conference of 1823, held at the Dresbach church appointed agents to secure subscription and capital for the printing of a religious paper and the establishment of a publishing house, the Scioto conference formally appointed John Russell, George Dresbach and Jonathan Dresbach trustees at its session May 21, 1834, and the first number of the "Religious Telescope" appeared December 31, 1834.

The Circleville church was organized in 1839 and the first building was completed prior to July 17, 1841. On August 1, 1845, the trustees of the Circleville church rented the front basement room of their church to the Publishing House trustees for a period of four years and for a consideration of eighty dollars per year. Here the "Religious Telescope" was published until the removal of the printing establishment to Dayton, Ohio, in 1853.

The general conference at Circleville in 1845 voted to establish an educational institution. The Scioto conference in session at the Bethlehem church (abandoned), near Circleville, in Pickaway county, October, 1846, took action to establish a college and Jonathan Dresbach, William Hanby and Lewis Davis were named the first trustees. The action resulted in the founding of Otterbein college in 1847.

There will be morning, afternoon and evening sessions of the conference and about 200 ministers and delegates will be present, besides the visitors.

United States Senator Simeon D. Fess will deliver an address Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock on "Our Relation to Foreign Problems."

The public is invited to attend all the sessions of the conference.

SUNDAY SERVICES

AT COUNTY HOME.
Rev. George Weir will hold services at the County Home Sunday afternoon August 30, at 2 o'clock.

Mrs. Jack Wardell and Mrs. Thomas Wardell spent the day in Columbus.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Dayton — M. C. Weir late Friday was appointed receiver for the Nickol manufacturing company, the head of which, Fred C. Nickol, is in jail, charged with robbing a branch of the Dayton savings and trust company of $28,000. He is held under $50,000 bond for the grand jury September 8.

Cleveland — State Dry Agent W. J. Patrick was arrested Friday a warrant sworn out by State Senator George H. Bender. The warrant charged perjury. Patrick was arraigned, plead not guilty and was released under $1,000 bond. The warrant was the result of a dry raid on Bender's home in which no liquor was found.

Cleveland — Joseph Purcell, 27, was held in jail Saturday on charges of embezzling $9,000 from Kelley company, peanut product manufacturers. Purcell's arrest was brought about by Ruth Lawrence, who claimed he wooed her, but that she later discovered he was married.

Youngstown — Anthony Kurzner, steel worker, was under arrest Saturday, charged with the murder of John Dote, a neighbor, who was shot and killed Friday night. Dote was shot as he met Kurzner on a side street. Police believe the shooting culminated a bootleg feud.

Buckeye Lake — With thousands of Klansmen in attendance, the annual Ohio Klonvocation of the Ku Klux Klan opened here Saturday.

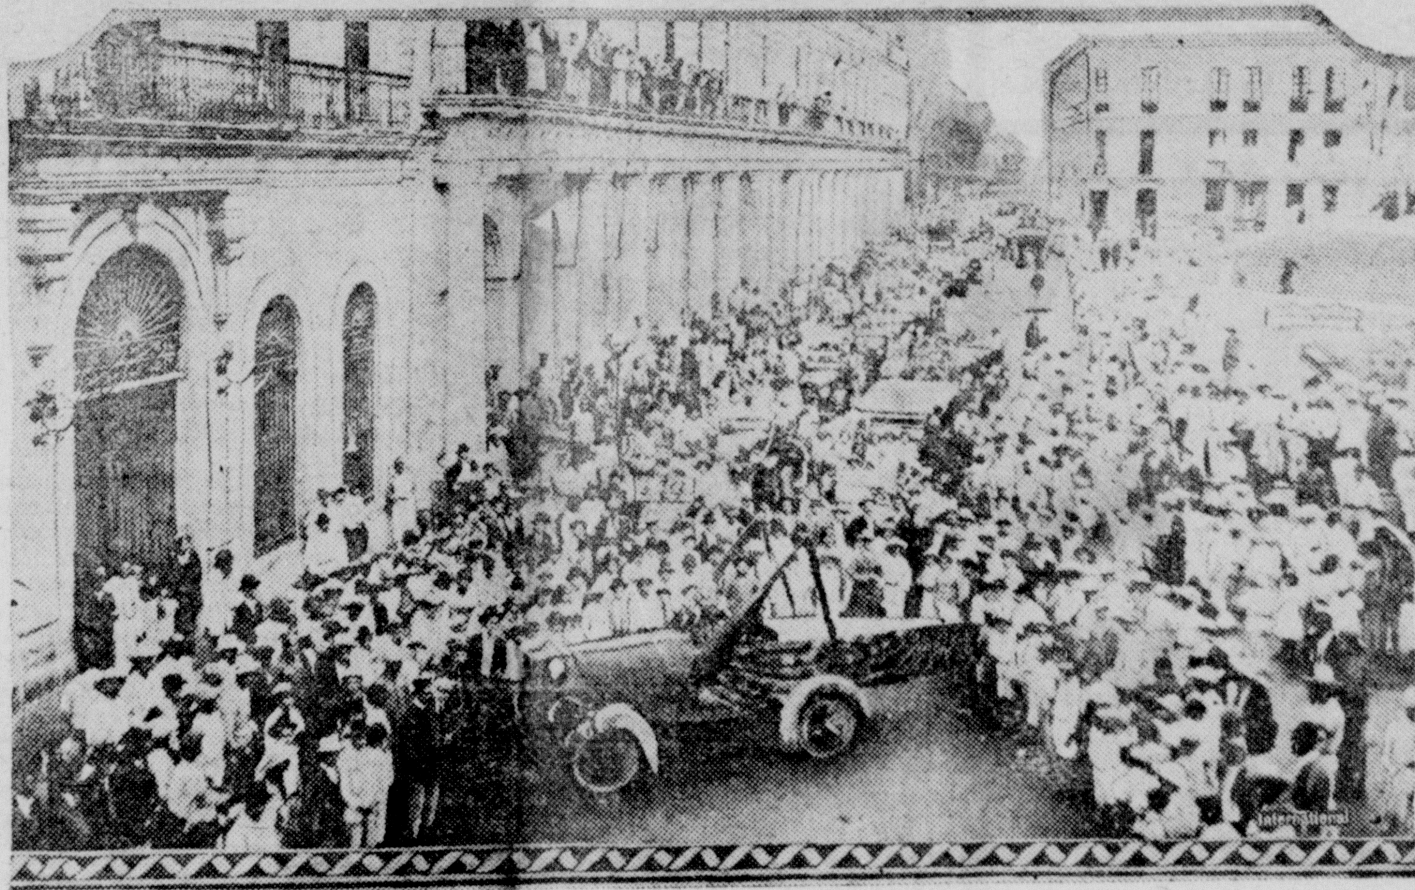

Headquarters were established on a 700 acre tract leased for the purpose.

MAY GO TO JAPAN

Mondell, former representative from Wyoming and Republican leader in the house, is now being mentioned in Swampscott, the summer capital, and in official circles in Washington as the probable successor to the late Edgar Bancroft as American ambassador to Japan. OLD IRONSIDES TO BE SAVED ELKS ORDER ASSUMES TASK

Will Make Contact With Every School In Nation And Stage Patriotic Lessons Interwoven With The Deeds And Adventures of The Famous Ship—Now Tied To Pier In Boston Navy Yard.

President Elliot's famous Five Foot Shelf wouldn't commence to hold all the volumes written around the battles, cruises and escapades of "Old Ironsides," the most famous of all fighting ships in the American navy, yet but of the mass of literature written around this historic treasure there is practically nothing that tells of the U. S. frigate CONSTITUTION as being one of the fastest sailing ships that has ever been designed and built on American shores. Yet it is a fact that "Old Ironsides" was the first Yankee "skimming dish" and that the old frigate in 1809 showed more speed than the Columbia did when she out sailed the Shamrock in the last of her famous cup races.

The modern yachtsman, after one look at the Constitution would be very likely to say "the old tub couldn't get out of her own way." In a few words this famous old Yankee warship was what a yachtsman might call the original Yankee "skimming dish." She deepened on her breadth of beam to keep her upright when the wind blew high, just as our typical yachts of twenty-five years ago did. In her famous race with the British squadron off the Jersey beach—a race that took place only a few miles south of the international yacht racing grounds, the wide and shoal model was victorious, just as the Yankee yacht model has always been victorious. This is not to say that a breadth of beam equal to three times the depth of hold is best known, but that the model of the Constitution was better than that of any warship she ever met.

The bows of the Constitution were made rounding because long twenty-four pounders were to be pointed out of ports on each side of the stem of "bow chasers." The crew needed deck space when handling one of the old-time guns with its side tackles. But if the bows were round the lines were not as hard under water as one might think at first glance. Indeed, the under water body of the old Constitution if it is to be critically examined, will be found astonishingly near to that of some of the swiftest of our tiny racers, wherein the toboggan model always whips that approaching a needle.

And speaking of yachts suggests another very interesting comparison. The waterline of the yacht Columbia (the cup defender) was a little less than four times her beam and so was the Constitution's. The beam of the Columbia was a little more than twice the draft of the hull, properly speaking, that is, excluding the fin keel, and so, too, is that of the Constitution. The greatest breadth of beam in the Constitution was at about one-third of her length forward of her taff rail, and the Columbia's is not far from the same location. Of course this is not to say that the two models are alike; it is to call attention to some remarkable coincidences in their main proportions. Joshua Humphries who designed the Constitution, knew how to determine the main proportions of his ships.

Just how fast the Constitution could sail has been recorded often in her log-books. When the squall struck her in her famous race for the life of the nation, she reached away with a wind that was barely free at eleven knots an hour. By her log during the year, 1809, she showed "a speed of thirteen and one-half knots going free under top gallant sails." Undoubtedly she had more than half a gale to drive her. It is likely, considering that her royals were furlled that the wind varied from thirty to forty miles an hour. She certainly had the wind just as she wanted it, and we may therefore compare her with the Columbia once more.

In the Columbia's last race with the shamrock the two had all the wind they wanted, they carried all the sail they could stagger under and it took the Columbia one hour and seventeen and a half minutes to run fifteen miles. It was the race of a lifetime. No man need hope ever to see a more magnificent spectacle, but at best the flyer was able to sail at a rate of a little more than twelve knots for short spurts. With a beam wind and smooth water she could do better—if she had things just to her

BIRDSHOT FOR FOUR MEN IN MELON PATCH

Said They Were Hunting for Turtles and Exhibited Seine as Proof.

Caught in a melon patch, where they said they had wandered while hunting for turtles, four Columbus men were subjected to a barrage of birdshot, Thursday night on the farm of Dave Tarbill, northeast part of Fayette county. Those wounded were given treatment, and the four were locked up over night in the Fayette county jail at Washington Court House.

John Luke, aged 30, 453 Mt. Vernon avenue and Henry Lewis, aged 44 573 East Spring street, were kept in a doctor's office for an hour after the encounter, while the tiny shot was being plucked from their skin. Arthur Thomas, aged 42, colored, 222 Cleveland avenue, also was wounded slightly. The fourth member of the quartet was James Mulligan, aged 29, who did not give his Columbus address.

Mr. Tarbill had employed a man to protect his melon patch. At a late hour, Thursday, the guardian saw the four men on the premises. When they did not immediately obey the command to leave he fired at them. In substantiation of their claim that they were hunting turtles, the men exhibited a seine.

The AMERICAN LEGION

LEADS IN MAKING GOOD AMERICANS

Although Frank Clay Cross, new director of the national Americanism commission of the American Legion, has spent much of his life, as he says, "above the clouds," far up the sides of Colorado mountains just at the timber line, he measures up to a family tradition of grasping the facts of life as they are and fighting to mold them into something better.

It is the pioneer spirit, a spirit that goes out into the wilderness and hews from dense forests homes and cities and states, a spirit that conquers plains and mountains and, the physical side subdued, moves on to wrestle mightily with the finer, the spiritual things.

Frank Cross's family has been a family of fighting pioneers for generations, always on the frontier of civilization. His forebears came to America before the Revolution. His great-grandfather was a pioneer settler in Marion county, Indiana, where national headquarters of the Legion is located. The family trekked across country with the covered wagon. From Indiana they moved into Iowa when that state was opening up. Then to Kansas and to Colorado, while the buffalo were still on the plains and Indian bands roamed the country. "In coming to Indianapolis," he says, "I am the first of the tribe to back track and hit the trail for the East."

He had laid a precedent in some sort for that, when he hit the trail for overseas and the battlefields of France when there was work that needed much to be done over there. Ancestors of his had fought in every one of the nation's wars. His entire family—his father, two brothers and himself—volunteered in '17. A younger brother, Charles, lost his life in France.

Frank Cross put in 13 months in France. He was on detached service with the British north of Calais, looking after American troops who came across the channel from England. Then he was sent down to Tours with the French, where he handled all shipments out of that city. He was discharged in Wyoming in July, 1919.

He became assistant chemist with an oil company for about a year. In the interval he married Miss Helen M. Fry, a former schoolmate at the University of Denver. She was of a family of teachers and Cross' thoughts turned to that profession. He went in for more schooling—economics, sociology and political science—and then became superintendent of a consolidated school. In 1923 he became head of the department of economics at the Colorado School of Mines.

He also became a lecturer at the Denver "opportunity school." That was a turning point for him, the thing which led directly to his appointment as director of the Americanism commission. He gave lectures of advice, inspiration, information. He touched on anything which would be generally helpful to the foreign-born seeking to become American citizens and to play their part as such. He had two thoughts in mind. One was to give all the information necessary to pass the naturalization examination. The other was to give them an understanding and appreciation of America, of what the country stands for, of its history, its institutions, its customs, its ideals, its aspirations—and to inspire them to live good American citizens. "Just better citizenship" is the way he sums it up.

Helping to make out the questions for teacher examinations in the Colorado schools, the new director found out that many of the teachers, especially in outlying districts, knew "less than a kid ought to know" about the fundamentals of Americanism. So he organized an Americanism section in the State Education association. He also formed the Allied Council for Americanism Committees, embracing the various patriotic societies of the state.

Meantime John C. Vivian, commander of the Colorado department of the Legion, had seen his work and invited him to become chairman of the state Americanism committee. From this position he was advanced by the national executive committee to the directorship of the National Americanism commission, where he goes on pioneering (as his father had done for years before him), not with dreamy velivities but with a practicality that goes to the heart of the problem, for a better America.

Secretary Work Says Whole Nation Will Profit Through Giving Aid To Domestic Sugar Beet Growers

(c) U & U

Dr. Hubert Work, Secretary of the Interior, whose picture is inset above in a photograph of beet loading from a field that was desert a few years ago, has made vigorous pleas recently for the thousands of Americans who raise sugar beets on the reclaimed lands of the west. Below Dr. Work's picture is part of a prize herd of Colorado sheep, fed from beet tops and pulp.

The sugar beet has become recognized as the prime rotation crop of the reclamation area, but present prices are said to make the farmer barely break even, and the farmers' associations claim that had President Coolidge decided to lower the sugar tariff the whole industry would have been wiped out in a year.

Secretary Work said in a recent interview at Cheyenne, Wyoming: "I find that the entire reclamation area has been stimulated and helped by President Coolidge's decision to retain the sugar tariff.

"The growing of sugar beets is one of the most natural and nationally profitable uses to which our reclaimed land can be put. Thousands of American citizens have invested years of careful work and all the money they have in developing small beet sugar farms. To them the President's action means that they can continue without going bankrupt or living like peons on a Cuban plantation. To the country at large the decision means preservation and increase of a domestic supply of a vitally basic commodity. With the tariff lowered we would soon have no domestic sugar crops and then closely organized interests, operating outside the jurisdiction of our anti-trust laws, could charge us what they pleased for sugar."

THE "WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN" SAYS:

Meeting reporters of the various news organizations is one of the daily tasks of the President of the United States. The upper photo shows President Coolidge meeting newspaper reporters on the lawn at the summer "White House" at Swampscott, Mass. In the center of the group and facing the President is Dale Van Every, United Press Correspondent at Swampscott. Inset is President Coolidge walking with W. J. Losh, manager of the Washington United Press Bureau.

When the "White House Spokesman" speaks the whole world listens.

The President of the United States is perhaps the foremost news producer. What the government is going to do to aid farmers, to collect foreign debts, to reduce taxes—all is news not only along the highways of this nation but also along the byways of every civilized country.

So it is that bona fide correspondents of American and foreign press associations and newspapers eagerly gather at the press conferences of the President. They are held twice each week whether he is in Washington or, as now, at the summer White House in Swampscott, Mass.

The greatest care is taken to protect the President against erroneous quotation and misinterpretation because his utterances "for guidance" carry tremendous import.

Pat McKenna, for years the doorkeeper at the White House Executive offices passes on each correspondent who seeks to attend the conferences. Secret service men flank the President during the meetings.

Nothing he says can be quoted directly unless he specifically authorizes it. The correspondents submit their questions in writing, in advance of the conference. The President reads them, ignores those he doesn't wish to consider and answers those he selects for discussion.

Thus the President, through the press, speaks to the people and the people, through representative correspondents, question the President that they may learn the government viewpoint on pending issues.

The accompanying pictures reveal United Press correspondents obtaining news from the chief executive. Read their dispatches appearing in this newspaper and keep informed on what the "White House Spokesman" says.

HOLE IN THE FENCE

"You say," said the defending counsel, "that the fence is 14 feet high, and that you were standing on the ground—not mounted on a ladder or anything?"

"I do," answered the witness.

"Then," replied counsel triumphantly, "perhaps you can explain how you, a man of five feet four, could see over a fence 14 feet high, and watch the prisoner's action?"

"There's a bit of a hole in the fence," was the calm reply.

Box Coat of Velvet and Skirt of White Flannel

This outfit, consisting of a box coat of velvet and a straight skirt of white flannel, makes a charming combination of color and fabric for autumn sports wear.

Matter of "Making Over" Simple for Dressmaker

Never has the problem of "making over" been so simple as during the present season. The dresses are so short, so narrow, and practically sleeveless, that they require little material, time or labor for their fashioning. Sometimes an entire dress can be constructed from a plaited skirt, supplemented with a small amount of other material, usually of a contrasting color, for trimming.

One plaited white flannel skirt was carefully pressed, after the hem had been ripped out and the belt removed, turned the "wrong" way of the goods, and with the addition of collar, cuffs and a wide band around the bottom, all of green flannel, the home dressmaker produced in a very short time, a smart sports frock. A similar skirt was the genesis of a white flannel dress having collar, cuffs and godets of scarlet flannel. A heavy green crepe silk skirt was made into a dress which had neck and sleeve trimming, and an applied band, just above the knee, of tan silk. These dresses were all cut in one piece with kimono sleeves.

With care a separate waist and skirt pattern can be used in cutting over a skirt. A quaint little bodice frock with a gathered skirt was evolved from the skirt of a lavender beach cloth middy suit. This dress was trimmed with a soft white fichu collar and ruffled cuffs.

The full skirt of a dress three or four years old often can be used for the main portion of a new garment by turning the material the wrong way and "piecing out" the length with scraps from the waist, sleeves, girdle or sash.

By studying fashion cuts the resourceful woman can find new ideas whereby she can utilize the old dresses which are too out of date to wear with ease of mind, but are "too good" to discard because of the excellent quality of the material in them.

An Array of Colors for Milady's New Fall Coat

Color will be predominant in coats for fall. Brown and blue effects are in the lead. Among the blues favored are french blue, rozen blue, periwinkle blue, old blue flax blue, bleu de roi.

Other prominent colors are bracken, cocoa, chocolate, chinese red and yellow, onion brown, almond and caster, beige, smoke gray, eucalyptus and emerald green, combinations of twine and beige, biscuit and beige; bud and blossom shades are good, while the pastel shades will still be much in evidence. Combinations of black and white, sometimes called "day-and-night" effects, are also looked upon with favor.

Among the leading furs used are nutria, racoon, chinchilline, wolf in apricot, blue, havana brown, eclipse, natural and black. Lynx cat is popular, while skunk is employed in a black-and-white combination, which is effective on a black coat giving a so-called "day-and-night" effect.

Japanese fox, ringtail cat in natural and cocoa, and squirrel in the new shades of rose martin and blue fox, as well as natural, are other furs which are well liked. Kit fox is being used especially in eclipse and light blue and also in the natural.

Rage for Plaiting Now Reaches to Glove Cuffs

Obviously, plaiting has come to stay, perhaps for several seasons. There is, at the moment, a perfect craze for it and its dainty, decorative quality is found to add charm to many things other than an evening gown in the fashionable wardrobe. Some of the new transparent coats which have achieved a sudden popularity are made of chiffon, marquisette, georgette or lace plaited very fine. Among the newest things in scarfs are some of plaited material, or of plain goods finished with a plaited ruffle at each end. Neck ruffs, hat trimmings, even glove-cuffs are seen in plaiting, and some of the luxuries in negligees and lingerie are of plaited chiffon mouseline or crepe de chine.

COLOSSAL GULLIBILITY OF
CUSTOMERS OF BOOTLEGERS

Treasury Bulletins May Be Issued Showing How Much of The Stuff Is Poison And How Little Is Genuine—Venders Are Growing Rich At The Expense of Wealth And Health of Patrons.

General Lincoln C. Andrews says the most surprising thing to him about men who patronize a bootlegger is their colossal gullibility.

The new assistant secretary of the treasury was continuing an exclusive, unauthorized interview granted the United Press when he made the remark. Disliking exaggeration, he passed over the phrase.

"Yes," he decided, "that's it. Their colossal gullibility."

Andrews, who was explaining for the first time his plans for enforcing prohibition, said he had in mind the idea of educating consumers of "genuine Scotch whisky" and other allegedly imported liquor.

"We might let them know what they are drinking," he proposed.

Treasury bulletins, showing how much of what the bootlegger sells is more or less poison and how little of it is genuine, may be prepared and issued periodically.

"I don't know at the present time how much of the stuff sold as genuine is spurious," the general admitted. "But I believe it might be a good idea to have an analysis made and reports issued."

"From what some of the government chemists tell me, patrons of the bootleggers might have their eyes opened."

"It is amusing to me," he continued, "how men who have common sense in other matters and would demand proof of other claims when their health as well as their wealth is concerned, seem to accept without question the statements of men they know to be criminals, violators of their country's laws."

Andrews hopes to work thru the churches, the Y. M. C. A. and such organizations as the Rotary clubs in educating those who constitute the "market" for bootleg liquor, as well as in gathering reports on the progress of prohibition.

Suppression of the liquor traffic is to be the main objective of his federal forces; beyond this, the people must help.

The general came to a discussion of the point where a community is cut off from outside supplies of liquor.

"There may be an undesirable element in that community which will attempt to continue to manufacture liquor and dispense it," he suggested.

"In that case, it will, in a measure, be up to the respectable members of the community to decide whether they want such men in their midst. They will know who is making the liquor and what to do about it.

"Public sentiment probably will rid such a community of its bootleggers."

Desiring to put prohibition enforcement upon a dignified business footing, General Andrews sees two phases to violation with which he will attempt to deal, the "supply" and the "market."

In another portion of the interview he explained that the government will seek to curb the supply of liquor at its source, will strike hard at the bootlegger who is gathering and distributing illegal supplies and will tighten control of liquor traffic all along the line.

When it comes to the question of the bootleg "market," Andrews looks for cooperation. He hopes to win thru the kind of men he has appointed as regional directors and their subordinates.

"I wanted $60,000 a year men who would make a sacrifice and take appointments in the prohibition unit and help put it over," he explained.

"As far as possible, I want my administrators to be in charge of their home districts. I don't want people of a certain state, for example, to feel that I think it necessary to get a man from outside to tell them how to manage their affairs. In every instance where such a course has been practicable, a local man has been chosen."

General Andrews believes the confidence of the people is to be won thru dignified enforcement which will not quibble over petty infringements to the extent of losing sight of big offenders. And he believes that with restoration of respect for law enforcement will come a sentiment in favor of prohibition that will make the entire country dry.

"What have you to say to the man who doesn't believe in prohibition and continues to drink?" the general was asked.

"For God's sake, don't patronize the bootlegger," he replied emphatically. They are enriching themselves at your expense, possibly at the expense of your health.

"They are violating the law, frequently by means of corruption and you are helping them to profit by it."

"They are buying apartment houses and laying up wealth that may make their children the aristocracy of the next generation, while yours will have to work."

"If you are going to drink—well don't patronize the bootleggers."

Byron Carmean, of Deercreek township and Ottie and Clayton Hockman, of Laurelville, went to Columbus where they have been selected to play in the all state band of 300 members during the State fair.

Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Puffenbarger, of Williamsport, have as their guests over the weekend Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Cutright, Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Ware, Springfield, and Mr. and Mrs. George G. Wise, of Cleveland.

Miss Evelyn Collier is spending her vacation the guest of her sister, Mrs. W. T. Fryback at La Junta, Colorado. Miss Collier has written to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Collier, that she has visited the Garden of the Gods and intends to scale Pikes' Peak before returning home.

W. E. Hilyard, local agent of the Pennsylvania lines, attended a luncheon at the Elks club Lancaster, Thursday in honor of Bruce Walker, agent of the Pennsylvania railroad Lancaster, who will be retired and placed on the pension roll August 31, after forty years service with the company.

Famous English Park

Hyde park is a famous pleasure ground in London, a mile and a half long and three-fourths of a mile wide, extending westward from Piccadilly to Kensington gardens and covering an area of 300 acres. It was formerly the ancient manor of Hyde, belonging to the abbey of Westminster, and was laid out as a park and enclosed in 1535, in the reign of Henry VIII. In Elizabeth's time, stags were still hunted there, and under Charles II it was used for horse racing. The "Serpentine," an artificial sheet of water, was introduced by Queen Caroline, wife of George II.—Kansas City Star.

AMUSEMENTS

A trio of the most popular players on the screen, as well as a host of favorites in minor roles, make up the cast of "The Sporting Venus" Marshall Neilan's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production coming to the Met theater Monday.

Blanche Sweet, who has risen to greater heights than ever before since her return to the screen two years ago plays the titular character of the "Sporting Venus." It is a role which she plays with such dash and finish that it seems impossible that she is the same person who created the screen role of "Anna Christie."

Opposite Miss Sweet in the leading male part is Ronald Colman, who rose to international popularity in "The White Sister," "Tarnish," "Romola" and "Her Night of Romance."

Lew Cody, one of the most villainous villians of the screen, combines his usual "cinema" rascalities with some delightful comedy as an impoverished European prince.

The supporting cast include Edward Martindel, Kate Price, Arthur Hoyt, Hank Mann, Josephine Crowell, George Fawcett and others.

"DOG ROBBER"

Tells How and Why Army Officers Make Soldiers Servants.

Do you know what a "dog robber" is? He is an enlisted man in the United States army who acts as a sort of a body servant for a commissioned officer. In an effort to determine the attitude of the private soldier toward becoming what is substantially a valet, Liberty has consulted several men who have been "dog robbers," or "strickers." One private tells the why and wherefore of the system in this week's Liberty. Says he:

"Maybe you wonder what the word 'dog robber' means? The best explanation I can give for it is the old army story that a striker got the name because he is supposed to have matched his skipper's dog for the dog's food and bed, and the dog lost."

"The 'dog robber' makes his skipper's bed. He polishes his skipper's boots. He is a footman, a butler, a valet, and bottle washer. He's housekeeper, errand boy and clothes presser for his officer, if his officer isn't married, and if he's a real good 'dog robber' he can even cook and mix drinks."

"The World War changed many things in our army, among which is the attitude of the officer toward the soldier and toward his striker. In the old days the officer who rose from the ranks was the toughest egg in the basket."

"There's a lot of swank in the army now that was never there before the war, and that's why it is harder to get strikers. A limey of the enlisted man class is a natural born servant, but you can't find that class in America."

With the Flag Above

We printed the other day some remarks on the last journey of the battleship Oregon to a quiet harbor in which the ship will be kept on exhibition, in comparison with the historic journey which it made around the Horn to join Sampson's fleet as war with Spain loomed on the horizon. The latter journey attracted no notice. The whole nation, hearts adutter, stood by as the earlier one progressed.

A contributor to the New York Sun, one who was evidently one of the crew in the Oregon's historic race, tells of an incident which ought to be preserved.

When a warship goes into action, as it was feared the Oregon would be compelled to do with the Cervera squadron lying in wait, it is customary to clear the vessel of lifeboats and rafts, as splinters from them are as dangerous as shot and shell of the enemy. If the Spaniards had appeared the Oregon would have had thus to strip itself and a shot below the waterline would then have sent the entire personnel of the ship to Davy Jones' locker. The contingency caused considerable discussion on the ship. Finally one of the officers put the matter up to Captain Clark. He said:

"Captain, if we get into a fight with the Spanish fleet after casting all our boats and rafts adrift, and we get one good shot below the waterline, what is going to become of us?"

"Well," said Captain Clark, "a $5,000,000 coffin will be good enough for me."

That ended all discussion along that line. Every man felt that if the Oregon was a good enough coffin for Captain Clark it was good enough for him — if so it must be they would fight to the limit and go down with the colors flying to a glorious death for their country.—New Orleans States.

Trouble for Norfolk Duke

These are hard times, even for the duke of Norfolk, who is one of the wealthiest noblemen in the world today. As the present duke is only sixteen years of age, his mother manages family affairs. She decided to close Arundel castle until her son was of age, leaving only caretakers at the ducal seat. In the meantime the duchess and young duke will live in Italy, where the rate of exchange will permit the family coffers to be replenished by the time the duke reaches his majority. However, as he owns most of London between the Strand and the Thames river Norfolk will be able to struggle along in spite of taxes. —Le Figaro.

Has Sun a Companion?

What may be a genuine companion to the sun has been discovered in the constellation of Taurus, the Bull, according to a study by Dr. W. J. Layton, of the Harvard College observatory. The star, which is known as 46 Tauri, and just barely visible to the unaided eye, has been observed at the Lick observatory in California, and the Dominion Astrophysical observatory at Victoria, B. C. It is approaching the sun at a speed of about half a kilometer per second, which is a very slow velocity, astronomically speaking. As its motion across the sky is also relatively slight, it is believed to be moving through space with the sun.

Advocates Mutual Creed

A mutual creed for all denominations was advocated at Cardiff, Wales, by one of the leading speakers at the twelfth quadrennial council of the Reformed churches. He urged the council to recommend adoption of "a common statement of faith for the Reformed churches, more distinct than the Reformed creeds, but one which would absorb the best of the Westminster confession and other similar creeds." He welcomed the efforts under way to unite all the Christian religions and urged that his hearers should lend all possible aid to this object without sacrificing their church.—Family Herald.

May Revive Old Court

An Oxford (England) undergraduate is to be tried in the ordinary courts of assize on a charge of manslaughter arising out of a motor accident. The frequency of motor smashes in which undergraduates are concerned and the gravity of their attendant consequences has led a famous law don to suggest that the court of the lord high steward should try and punish the offenders.

This university court has been in existence since 1404, although it has not tried a case since a century before the days of Blackstone.

Practicing Law at 92

Northern Ireland has still in active practice a lawyer who has reached the age of ninety-two. He is George Hill Smith, who was born in 1833 but did not go to the bar till at the age of forty-four. He practiced in Dublin and on the northeast circuit and on the setting up of a separate Ulster judiciary confined himself to Belfast where he acts as one of the crown counsel.

Ornate Telegraph Pole

Because the old telegraph pole in front of the city hall at Aberdeen, Wash., was ugly and not in keeping with the city hall architecture, Councilman James Empey succeeded in getting the railway and light company of his town to remove it and replace it with a new one of becoming design, brightly painted. The pole will carry a brass plate giving the distinction of its choice to the councilman.

OLD IRONSIDES

liking, she might equal the record speed of the old Constitution!

This comparison of the speed of the cup defender of twenty-five years ago and the old frigate that was built in 1797 will undoubtedly shock the modern yachtsman, but they are based on historic facts and cannot be denied. The old frigate was built to run or fight and she proved her class in both. The Constitution successfully out-sailed every fleet and every ship that encountered her. In forty battles she never tasted defeat. Today she is tied to a pier in the Boston navy yard with bulging hull and rotting timbers, and unless the children of the nation subscribe the $500,000 necessary for her restoration the famous old historic ship will suffer her first defeat.

The Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks with 1400 lodges and 900,000 members have assumed the job of saving "Old Ironsides." During October 19th-24th, which has been designated as "Old Ironsides Week" the Elks will make contact with every school in the nation, stage patriotic lessons interwoven with the deeds and adventures of "Old Ironsides," present each school with a four colored reproduction of the old ship, painted by Charles R. Patterson, the noted marine artist, and then take up the collection of the kiddies to restore the old ship. James R. Nicholson, past grand exalted ruler of the Elks is directing the drive for the Elks with headquarters at the Boston navy yard. Rear Admiral L. R. de Steiguer, commandant of the first naval district, is chairman of the national committee which has the job of raising the funds to restore the frigate.

"Every American who has sailed a ship should have an interest in 'Old Ironsides,'" says Rear Admiral de Steiguer. "She is the last survivor of those romantic days and the yachtsmen of today should do their part in helping the restoration by sending their mite to the nearest lodge of Elks. The children are to be given the first opportunity, but if we wish to get all the money necessary we have to appeal to the adults of the nation."

SQUIRREL LAW

Warning that drastic action will be instituted against all persons found violating the Ohio law governing squirrel hunting has been announced by D. O. Thompson, chief of the state division of fish and game.

Attention was directed by Thompson to the statutory provision authorizing the levying of fines up to $200 by local courts against persons convicted of hunting out of season.

Indorsement was given by Thompson to the proposal that the game laws be amended so as to not only provide for forfeiture of license by violators of game laws, but also to decree that offenders under sufficient provocation, be not permitted to obtain a license again.

The squirrel hunting season opens September 15 and ends on October 20. The law prohibits the squirrel hunter from bagging more than five squirrels a day, and prohibits their sale.

Odd Welsh Architecture

The old High street of Conway in north Wales is characteristic of Great Britain in nothing more than in its mixture of architectural styles and chance effects, says the Christian Science Monitor. Saxon, Norman, Flemish, Tudor, early Victorian and a touch of Gothic are all shown in the few buildings here represented. Could we see more of this typically British High street, doubtless we should find "Queen Anne" in evidence somewhere; also late Victorian and Neo-Georgian are well represented.

Town planning, as one so often sees it in other countries, was never quite the custom in Great Britain. A street in one of her towns represents very much more than a mere page in her history.

How Bryan Kept Cool

William Jennings Bryan once told how he kept cool when making a speech.

"Do you know," he observed, "that when I am addressing an audience in a particularly warm hall, I take a small piece of ice about the size of a pullet's egg. I put it in the palm of my right hand and hold it tightly. Then I shift it to my left hand, holding it in either hand for about five minutes."

"Then I pass my cold hands over my forehead. I have always found this very effective."

TRY US FOR A WANT AD

WID

That was the first great step towards the giving of free hand opportunity to capable individual producers. "The Miracle Man" returned a tremendous profit. The financial backers had originally committed themselves to provide one hundred thousand dollars to be expended at the sole discretion of Mr. Tucker. When sixty thousand only had been expended, I made the deal with Zukor which guaranteed a tremendous profit whether the picture be good, bad or indifferent. Of course it was good and made plenty.

Now I come to the important point in my story. Just as a lot of mad prospectors in a gold field rush blindly hither and yon following the latest rumored "strike," so did the movie crowd frantically try to gain success by the "individual unit" idea of production. In making Tucker's contract I had carefully arranged that we would assume all responsibility and would be free from all interference. Following the success of "The Miracle Man," the producers began the "gold field rush" and blindly gave out contracts right and left to individuals who were not capable of assuming the responsibility. You see they thought, foolishly enough, that it was the "utter freedom of action" which had brought success, instead of knowing that giving responsibility is a great way to get results, only if you are careful as to what individuals are given the responsibility.

Anyway, the firm which financed us for "The Miracle Man" refused to listen to the pleadings of Mr. Tucker and myself regarding what individuals might be given responsibility and so within a year the company had sunk a million in addition to the fortune "The Miracle Man" had made for them. The banker, who had refused to listen, found his bank closed and the "general manager," a former clothing-store manager, who had handed out "carte blanche" contracts with kinglike waves of the arm, passed down and out and later committed suicide.

That was a serious blow to "individual" production. The following year there were more cases where the wrong individuals abused the confidence granted them by financial backers. There, within a period of three years, a dozen individuals did very serious harm to the idea of "individual units" of production. The big companies began a complicated system of "supervising" and "committee producing."

Ingenious Machines

At a recent German motor show there was exhibited a tank-plow. A caterpillar tractor working like an army tank drew a plow.

An automatic potato digger has been designed that the inventor says will prove a wonderful labor-saving machine on the farm. It not only digs up the potatoes, but discharges them in windrows for pickers.

Looking like a huge mosquito, a new machine is said to be able to bore a hole three feet deep and nine inches in diameter in half a minute. The machine looks like a small engine on four wheels, and carries a huge corkscrew-like drill in front of it at the end of two braces. A pull on a lever is sufficient to start the drill downward. Another pull stops it at the desired depth and brings it back to the starting point. The inventor built his original model from 23 pieces of farm machinery.

Didn't Know About Tub

An Indianapolis man was visiting in the country near where some small boys had an excellent swimming place.

The lads, in friendly fashion, invited him in one afternoon.

"Oh," replied the man, "I may not be able to swim now, for it has been years since I was in the creek."

One lad looked at him with a puzzled expression, then asked:

"Haven't you washed off since then?"—Exchange.

LAND SHARKS ARRESTED BY GOVERNMENT

Big Swindle Uncovered—Lots Under Water Sold at $100 Each.

Federal warrants charging use of the mails with intent to defraud were issued Thursday night for Jacob Factor, president of the Florida Land Co., and several associates, after a two months' investigation by postal inspectors.

The company is alleged to have done a business of between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000 in Florida real estate since its incorporation in Springfield last March. Besides Factor, the others named in the warrants are Maurice E. Drucker, H. Heinsius, H. J. Himmelstein and Newton Feldman, all officials of the concern.

Factor, according to reports of postal inspectors, before becoming connected with the Florida Land Co., put over a $500,000 fraudulent oil deal in England and is wanted there.

The scheme included the buying of large tracts of land in Orange county, Florida, which was later sold in Chicago and other midwestern cities at an average price of about $100 a lot. The land was represented, it is charged, with being a suburb of Orlando, Florida, termed the second largest city in the state.

Besides an extensive advertising campaign in Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Wisconsin, the company also sent out a boosters' committee, which included a Chicago alderman and police captain and which brought back glowing accounts of the land.

The lots, it is alleged, were represented as being improved property, with water, gas and electricity installed, with part of it on the Dixie Highway. Investigators said some of the land is inundated part of the time and none of it is improved.

Many of the investors here are of Polish descent. They also were attracted by stories of a mythical hotel costing $1,000,000 and more than 2000 lots have been sold, investigators said.

While in England several months ago, investigators said, Factor and Drucker organized the British Allied Estates, Ltd., and the Cambrian Trust Ltd, and sold Arkansas oil lands for upwards of $500,000, as a result of which they were sought in England.

Some of the cities circularized by the Florida Land Co., in its "garden-spot-of-the-world" campaign included Chicago, Fort Wayne, Gary and Valparaiso, Indiana.

No Repetitions for Hubby

A few months ago an English illustrated paper published a joke which struck me as having merit. When I repeated it in company of a gentleman who is supposed to know nearly all the jokes in the world he told me that in slightly different guise the same wheeze was current on the Pacific coast twenty years ago. He may or may not have been wrong. In any event, I like the British version.

A couple from the country have come up to London for a week's visit. They have seats in the first gallery for a performance of a society drama. To them the play proves exceedingly tiresome. In one of the intervals the husband, stifling a yawn, turns to his deeply bored wife:

"What comes next?" he asks.

She consults the program.

"It says 'ere, 'Act four, sime as Act one.'"

"Ow!" he exclaims, "let's op it. I couldn't sit through all the awful mess again!" (Copyright by the McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

Roses in Southwest

Most curious are the wild roses of the dry Southwest. They are low-stunted bushes of brown branches and many straight brown or white prickles, more like a gooseberry bush. The fruit is all prickles like the prickly gooseberry of our swamps, says Nature Magazine. The flowers are purple, rose or white, solitary, more like a strawberry bloom than of a rose. As the bushes are built for heat rather than for frost, they are not easy to grow in northern gardens, though they will live and bloom.

Better Late Than Never

By JUSTIN WENTWOOD

(© by Western Newspaper Union.)

RUMOR was busy in the Towne office in those days. The Towne company was not doing well; it had fallen behind the times. Most of its employees had been with it for years. "I guess we'll all be looking for jobs at the end of the month," said little Miss Chitterling, a spinster of fifty. "You should worry," answered the bookkeeper. "I guess you've got a wad stowed away."

"Oh, I'm not worrying," answered Miss Chitterling, who had saved just enough to keep herself in existence with great economy.

"She'll miss old Potter to quarrel with," mused the bookkeeper.

Old Potter was fifty-seven, and head of the clerical department. He, too, had saved the barest competence. Rumor said that in the prehistoric days Old Potter and Miss Chitterling had been engaged to be married. Something had come between them, and their quarrels constantly enlivened the office.

"I hear we're all going to be discharged," remarked Miss Chitterling acidly to Potter, as she passed him.

"I guess you'll have to get out and scramble for another job," sneered Potter.

"Maybe," answered Miss Chitterling. "But I tell you one thing—I don't look for a job where you do. I've had enough of you."

"Women in business offices are like a dirty floor," commented Potter. "Matter in the wrong place."

Miss Chitterling thrust her head into the air and passed him contemptuously. Old Potter's smiles were not elegant, to say the least. Old Potter grinned and went back to his work.

The days that followed were fraught with intense anxiety for all of the employees. Soon it was definitely known that the Towne company was being thrust against the wall. It could no longer compete in the market. Reorganization was talked of, but then it was learned that an offer had been made to purchase it, lock, stock and barrel—but not the employees.

No, no sane firm could be expected to take over that ancient lot, as Mr. Potter remarked in the hearing of Miss Chitterling.

During the next week Mr. Potter and Miss Chitterling engaged daily in the worst scraps in their career, so that it was a joy and a pleasure to bring them within sight of each other. The sight of each seemed to set the other's teeth on edge. But finally, when the blow fell, and notice was given to all the employees in a body, a sort of stunned peace descended.

On the last morning Mr. Potter gathered up his few possessions, his office coat and ruler, preparatory to leaving Towne's forever. Well, he was fixed for life in a very humble way. He could face the future with equanimity. But if only he had a friend to go shares, a friend with a little income of his own—how nicely they could manage!

Passing Miss Chitterling's desk, he saw that lady furtively dabbing at her eyes and putting powder on her nose. Miss Chitterling was thinking much the same thing. And Miss Chitterling was thinking of the many years she had spent in the Towne office.

Mr. Potter essayed a sympathetic glance, but it looked to Miss Chitterling like a horrible grin.

"Oh, get out of here!" she cried. "Haven't you any decency at all, to keep up your nagging and grinning at such a time like this?"

"I wasn't grinning, you miserable old cat," snorted Mr. Potter. "I was smiling good-by."

"You were g-grinning like a Cheshire cat, you horrid old man!" answered Miss Chitterling indignantly. "I do believe I hate you more than I could imagine hating Satan himself."

"You used to like me," commented Mr. Potter.

"Those days are past, thank goodness."

"I was only remembering them," said Mr. Potter. "You can't stop me doing that, can you?" he continued. "Say, remember that little oyster supper we had down at the beach?"

"Yes, and you swore to love me forever, and next day you accused me of making eyes at a s-s-stranger."

"That was because I loved you so much," said Mr. Potter.

"Well, you never loved me since."

"Listen, Elmira," said Mr. Potter. "Ever think how all this scrapping of ours is just the same old love in another form? What are we going to do without each other?"

"I d-d-d-don't kn-know," sobbed Miss Chitterling.

"Say, I was thinking of finding out if they make the same kind of stews down at the beaches now, Elmira. What do you say?"

And as Elmira said nothing Mr. Potter, after a quick glance which showed him that the office was empty, took Miss Chitterling in his arms and kissed her.

Bessie's Ambition.

Bessie, aged six, and sister, aged fourteen, were walking in Garfield park, toward the car line. As they passed a very inviting spot sister said, "Bessie, this is the place where my Girl Scout troop once took a hike. When you grow up, will you be a Scout?"

"Oh, no," replied Bessie gravely. "When I grow up I will be a lady."—Indianapolis News.

A System of Farming That Brings Health and Prosperity

Every farm, regardless of the method of farming practiced or of the crops raised, should have at least a few good milch cows to provide

- (1) Enough milk, cream and butter for home use;
- (2) Enough skim-milk to raise some calves, pigs and chickens;
- (3) Enough cream or butter to sell to pay, in part or entirely, current living expenses.

This plan has been a "life-saver" for thousands of farmers, especially during the hard times of the past two years. It insures a living, at least, and often other income besides.

Such a plan pays best with a De Laval Cream Separator. It soon pays for itself—and skims cleaner, lasts longer and is easier to operate and clean than any other.

IGNITION TIMING VERY IMPORTANT
Gas Must Be Fully Ignited at Instant Crank Pin Passes Center.
Correct ignition timing is very important, says William H. Stewart, Jr., president of the Stewart Automobile school. The charge of gas must be fully ignited at the instant the crank pin passes dead center. When this is done the full expansive force of the explosion is exerted on the piston and the best results are obtained. When the motor is turning over at the rate of 1,000 revolutions a minute the crank pin passes through top center much faster than when the motor is turning over at the rate of 500 revolutions per minute. Since it takes a certain amount of time for the charge of gas to become fully ignited it is necessary to introduce the spark into the cylinder a little in advance in order to fully ignite the charge by the time the crank pin passes dead center.
Volume of Spark.
The faster the motor turns over the more advanced must be the spark. The volume of the spark is not changed by advancing or retarding, but simply the time of the spark in relation to position of the crank pin. When a motor is turning over very fast the spark may be advanced as much as 40 degrees; that is to say, the charge will begin to ignite 40 degrees before the crank pin reaches top center. As the speed of the motor is reduced the advance must be reduced, otherwise the force of the explosion will be exerted on the piston too soon and the tendency will be to reverse the direction of the crank shaft. When the spark is too far advanced a knock is noticeable. This is caused by the piston acting against the explosive force. The momentum of the flywheel carries the piston through the cycle; otherwise it would reverse.
Four Segments.
The ignition distributor has four segments, one for each cylinder. The secondary finger "rotating clockwise" touches the segments in the order of 1, 2, 4, 3, which may be the firing order. Pistons No. 1 and No. 4 will be at top center and pistons No. 2 and No. 3 at bottom center. If piston No. 1 is up on compression and ready for ignition then piston No. 4 has just completed the exhaust and ready for the intake. Likewise piston No. 3 has just completed firing and piston No. 2 the intake.

Body of Automobile Is Injured by Use of Hose
The commonly-used rubber hose is perhaps the best method of cleaning the lower portions of the car, such as wheels, running gear, and mud-guards. But it is positively injurious when used on the body and highly finished surfaces, says a writer in the American Motorist.
The force with which the stream of water impinges on the surface causes the sand and dirt adhering to the body to be driven into the varnish, destroying its brilliancy, and no amount of polishing and rubbing will restore original luster.
The body should be washed with lukewarm soap and water and immediately dried with a soft camolis. Many owners use a mixture of cylinder oil and kerosene which they apply on the body, rubbing it dry afterwards. Another scheme is to use a mixture of boiled linseed oil and turpentine applied sparingly and rubbed absolutely dry. The use of this polish will restore even an old car to a degree of splendor that will please the user.

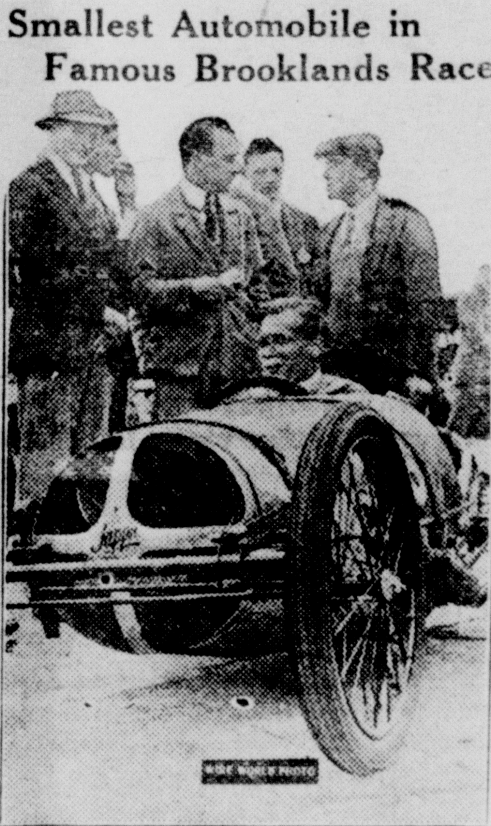

Smallest Automobile in Famous Brooklands Race
Great crowds of bank holiday vacationists witnessed the meeting at the Brooklands autodrome, England. Among the most interesting of the contesting cars was the single-cylinder Jappie, shown above, the smallest car entered. It was second in the 75 m. p. hr. short handicap.
Importance of Magneto Very Often Overlooked
The new car owner often worries about the electrical system of his car and is inclined to believe it is involved and liable to make trouble. As the spark is the life of the engine, he doesn't want anything to go wrong with the mechanism that generates it. Few beginners realize how simple, yet how effective and free from trouble the magneto really is. There is only one wire to each spark plug and one to the switch. There are no "don'ts" and only one "do"—oil it now and then. As the magneto current reverses automatically with every spark, there is no pitting of contact points. No current can be wasted when the engine is not running.
The magneto is dependable under all conditions of operation. Where the engine changes speed rapidly, as on hills, in traffic, or in quick getaways, the magneto takes care of all these changes without a constant "nursing" of the engine being necessary.

BALLOON TIRES WERE USED 25 YEARS AGO
What were probably the forerunners of the modern balloon tires were the tires used on this huge tricycle in 1898. The tricycle traveled nicely in dry weather, propelled by six men on bicycle seats, all pedaling for dear life on a chain gear with one man at the steering wheel. But in wet weather it slid all over the street as nonskid chains were not made large enough to go around the wheels. The two larger wheels were 14 feet in diameter, and the small wheel in front was six feet in diameter. The large wheels took tires 20 inches in diameter.

Knowledge of First Aid by Autoists Is Needed
That every man or woman who drives an auto should understand simple first aid methods, is the firm conviction of Dr. Herman Bundesen, Chicago health commissioner.
"Every year throughout the country, thousands of people unnecessarily lose their lives through automobile accidents, because those who could be of aid at the time of accident, become panicky and lose their heads when there is a cut artery," says Doctor Bundesen. "If they understood the simplest rudiments of first aid, a handkerchief and a pencil or ordinary stick of wood could be used as a tourniquet thus stopping hemorrhage until medical help arrived.
"The autolst, especially, is in need of first aid knowledge. Whether in the city or en route, he should be provided with a compact first aid kit.
"The common injuries which occur through automobile accidents are cuts, fractures or broken bones, cuts and bruises. Many minor injuries which through neglect, prove fatal, occur in taking off spare tires. Every wound, no matter how slight, should immediately be swabbed with iodine Splints, used in case of fracture, will keep the limb at rest and relieve the patient of much pain until placed in the hands of the physician."

Plumbing Ocean's Depths
The maximum depth at which even the most experienced diver can work is now about 200 feet. Scientists are constantly experimenting on divers' suits and equipment which will make possible operations at a greater depth. There is untold treasure in lost ships and it is hoped that improved apparatus will enable divers to salvage at depths never before attempted.

SIX TRUCKS COVER PICKAWAY COUNTY

Delivering Bread, Etc., of the Wallace Bakery.

Circleville has an industry in the Wallace Bakery that keeps six trucks, four Fords and two Dodge machines busy daily delivering fresh bread, cakes and pies to the people of Pickaway County.

Yesterday The Noecker Motor Co. delivered two large Dodge machines to the Wallace Bakery that were driven through from the Dodge Bros. Manufactory, Detroit, Mich., by Ralph Wallace and Carl Moats; they were accompanied to the manufactory by James Stout who drove a Dodge coupe here for Harry W. Heffner.

Mr. Wallace's reputation as a baker of first-class products will soon be heralded throughout this section of Ohio.

Honolulu

Honolulu this time was a revelation. A magic wand had touched the place and transformed it, even as Miami and Los Angeles have been transformed. It is now a flourishing city in a setting of surpassing loveliness. There is life and progress and enterprise on all sides. The down-town district has become metropolitan and up-to-date. The mountain sides are terraced with beautiful houses to which perfect roads, flower-lined, wind upward under canopies of great spreading trees.

One cannot be long in Honolulu without observing the racial problems which confront its administrators. Over 42 per cent of the population is Japanese, while only 8 per cent is American, British and German. The remainder is divided between Filipinos, Chinese, Hawaiian, semi-Hawaiian and Portuguese. I have seen a photograph of 32 school girls, each of a different race or racial combination.—John T. McCutcheon, in Hearst's International-Cosmopolitan.
